We invite you to participate in a class project study about food, food management, and cooking. We are interested in learning about your lifestyle in terms of the food you buy, the food you eat, and your cooking. This work might help us to design a new technology that could allow one to save money and help reduce food waste.

Description of subject involvement

If you decide to participate, we will ask you to participate in a class project study with us. The study will take 20-30 minutes of your time and will consist of an interview with you. For local participants, the study will be conducted online on Zoom or classroom in University of Minnesota, Kenneth Keller hall.

Benefits

Although you may not directly benefit being in this study, other students may benefit. Many other students may be given the opportunity to achieve a high grade in this course.

Risks and discomforts

There is little risk associated with this study. Participating in this study is no more risky than other everyday activities.

Compensation

There is no compensation for this study.

Confidentiality

We will not use your real name in any presentations or publications. We will use fake names when we refer to things you say in the interview.

To keep your information safe, the researchers will keep everything you say on a password protected computer. If you decide not to finish the interview, we will erase the things you said.

Voluntary nature of the study

Participating in this study is completely voluntary. Even if you decide to participate now, you may change your mind and stop at any time.
